From MONDAY January 2d, to THURSDAY January 19th, 1749.

LONDON, October 20.

TUESDAY a Board of Ordnance was held in Old Palace-Yard, Westminster, when several Iron Ordnance were ordered to Nova-Scotia, and the Plantations adjacent.

Extract of a Letter from Paris.

'All the Discourse here at present turns upon the Peace and the general Council. As to the former, we cannot pretend to see farther into its Consequences than People may do in other Places, and therefore it would not be very instructive or very entertaining, should I trouble you with our Conjectures upon that Head; but it is quite otherwise with regard to the second Topick, as to which it is scarcely possible that Strangers should have any tolerable Notion, farther than they have received from hence. We look upon it here as certain, that the last general Assembly of the Clergy gave Occasion to the Report, and to the Design of a general Council, which it is very probable may be held, and some will have it, that there is nothing can be more certain. I am not able to decide that, but in the mean Time I will tell you a Story of what passed between the two Ecclesiastical Chiefs, not unentertaining.

'The King had made Choice of the Archbishop of Tours to preside in the Assembly of the Clergy of France, that was held this Year in the Month of June. A very little Time before it met, our Prelate went to wait upon Father Boyer, who is looked upon as Chief of the Council of Conscience, and distributes all Ecclesiastical Favours on the Behalf of the Minister. After the first Compliments were over, the Priest gave the Prelate to understand that the King was much displeased, and the Church much scandalized at certain pastoral Instructions which he had published, in which he had treated the Jesuits pretty freely. The Archbishop seemed to be very much surprized, but having recollected himself a little, answered, That as he knew what Father Boyer meant by the Church, it did not give him much Concern, but if the King was offended, he knew what he had to do, and would do it without Delay. Father Boyer was very earnest to know what he meant, and after tormenting him for some Time, the Archbishop proceeded thus. My sincere Resolution is to go and desire his Majesty to excuse me from performing the Functions of that Office, with which he hath been pleased to honour me, for when it is once known that I have had the Misfortune to displease his Majesty, I shall have no Weight in that Assembly, and be in no Condition to serve him. Our clerical Statesman finding the Archbishop fixed in his Resolution, and apprehensive of the Consequences of it, was forced to acknowledge that there was not a Word of Truth in what he said, but that the whole was of his own Invention. This did not hinder the Archbishop from giving his Majesty a full Account of the whole Conversation; but how it was relished, I am not able to inform you.

'All I can tell you further is, that his Majesty finds such Variations and Contradictions, in the Accounts given him by the Court Divines, of the State of Religion in his Dominions, and finds such repeated Acts of Power requisite to support their Measures and Authority, that he is desirous of having the Matter better explained, if not by a general, at least by a national Council, for assembling of which it is said the Consent of his Holiness has not only been asked, but obtained.'

Yesterday Sir William Calvert, Knt. Lord-Mayor Elect, was presented to the Lord Chancellor, at his House in Ormond-street, for his Lordship's Approbation, with the usual Ceremonies.

They write from Paris, that the Civilians in France bestow the highest Commendations upon the first Volume of a great Work in Folio, published by Mr. Pothier, Counsellor in the Presidial of Orleans, in which the DIGEST is reduced into its proper Order, which it is conceived, when compleat, will be of the greatest Service to those of the Faculty there, and throughout all Europe. This Work is not only patronized by Monsr. Henry François Daguesseau, Counsellor of France, but was actually revised by that great Magistrate, who is equally esteemed for his extensive Learning, and revered for his unblemished Probity.

The last Letters from Rome say, that much Notice is taken there of the deep Silence that has been hitherto kept, in reference to the Manner of the Duke of Modena's being restored to his Dominions, which being compared with what has been long whispered, that a Negotiation is on foot for the Sale of a very considerable Territory in Italy, occasions many Speculations, but, as yet, nobody has penetrated the Secret, or if any of the Politicians have been so lucky, they have not thought proper to divulge it. However, Pasquin ventured, the other Day, to make the following shrewd Remark upon this Subject, viz. 'That Fidelity in Italy, which was never very 'common, was now become impracticable, since the Subjects, in 'some States, were in daily Expectations of new Sovereigns; others 'had only doubtful Expectations of their old ones, while a third 'Sort knew not who were to be their Masters; so that it is no wonder, their Morals were much of a piece with the Descendants of 'Jacob, who did every one after their own Heart, while there was 'no King in Israel.'

LONDON, October 29.

The Rumours we have had from Time to Time of the Measures taken by his Prussian Majesty, and the Motions of his Troops, appear by the last Letters from Berlin, to be vague and groundless, except that the Forces quartered in Silesia are so disposed, as that an Army of Sixty Thousand Men, with a suitable Train of Artillery, and all other Accommodations, may be drawn together in forty-eight Hours.

The French having felt the Want of a Fortress on the Var during the late War, Marshal Belleisle has chosen the Heights of Belleet and Carros as the most proper place to erect one, capable of covering that River for the future, and given Orders for setting about it immediately.

According to the Paris Letters, the 1st of November was fixed for the Departure of the young Pretender for Avignon, whither he was to be accompanied, they say, by Lord Gordon, and many other English and Scotch Lords attached to his Interest.

The last Letters from Hanover say, that his Grace the Duke of Newcastle gave lately a most splendid Entertainment there, upon the Conclusion of the Peace; at which were present a great Number of persons of the first Distinction, who expressed the highest Satisfaction at the Regularity, as well as Magnificence, with which every Thing was conducted.

By a private Letter from Brussels, dated November the 2d, we have Intelligence, that Lieutenant General Grune, and another of her Imperial Majesty's Commissaries, were actually arrived, and that the Conferences preparatory to the general Evacuation would be opened there in a few Days; that the Country about Bergen op-Zoom and Steenbergen, is in a Manner totally destroyed by the Waters lying upon them so long, that hitherto they have not been able to repair the Dykes of Cruysland, and that whenever it is done, it will cost the States immense Sums of Money, towards which the Empress ors who are already ruined, can contribute little or nothing. They add, that the Saturday before one Nicholas Spillot died at Antwerp in the one hundred and thirtieth Year of his Age, and who enjoyed his Senses to the very last.
